We currently have open positions on the Social Committee. If you are interested in the opportunity to join the Social Committee please contact General Manager Dawn Scott for more information. ■

Architectural Application Process

Most exterior projects on your home, including fence replacements and staining as well as painting of homes (even if you are painting the home to match existing colors), require the Architectural Committee's review and approval before work can commence.

Recently, Homeowners have been completing work on their homes without going through the architectural process for approval from the Architectural Committee. Architectural applications and the Association's Architectural Guidelines can be found on the Whitney Oaks website at <https://whitneyoaks.org/documents/>. Architectural meetings are held every third Wednesday of the month, via Zoom. For additional architectural application questions please contact Dawn Scott via email at dawn.scott@managementtrust.com. ■

Whitney Oaks Wildlife Notes

Ed Price

Warblers are relatively small birds. The Yellow-rumped Warbler is by far the most common warbler seen in Whitney Oaks especially during the fall, winter and spring months. Actually, it is considered the main winter warbler in North America. Not surprisingly, it is named for the bright yellow patch of feathers on its rump which is most visible in flight. The variety of yellow-rumped warblers found in California and in the Western states is referred to as the "Audubon's Warbler". It is distinguished from the yellow-rumped warblers living primarily in the Eastern US, the "Myrtle Warbler", by its bright yellow throat (see photo below). Males of both varieties have a small yellow cap and a patch of yellow feathers on their flanks. Females have more dull feathers (see photo) but sport the distinguishing yellow rump patch. Bird watchers often refer to these warblers as "butter butts".

The diet of the yellow-rumped warbler consists primarily of insects such as caterpillars (see photo), grasshoppers, aphids, beetles, gnats and spiders. As I write this article, a male yellow-rumped warbler is darting in and out of our maple tree like a flycatcher after an insect. If it is after insects, I can't see them. When insects are scarce, they eat berries such as juniper, bayberry, poison oak and wax myrtle. One of the reasons it can winter farther north than most warblers is that it can digest the wax on the coatings of berries.

Nests are built by the female using materials such as bark fibers, pine needles, small roots, twigs, grasses and weeds and lined with hair and feathers. Four to five eggs are laid by the female which she incubates for 12-13 days. Both parents feed the fast-growing young which leave the nest 10-14 days after hatching. Two broods are normally produced each year.

Populations estimates show that yellow-rumped warblers are increasing in numbers. Keep those binoculars handy. You may spot one where you live.
