Architectural Application Process

Most exterior projects on your home, including fence replacements and staining as well as painting of homes (even if you are painting the home to match existing colors), require the Architectural Committee's review and approval before work can commence. Recently, Homeowners have been completing work on their homes without going through the architectural process for approval from the Architectural Committee. Architectural applications and the Association's Architectural Guidelines can be found on the Whitney Oaks website at <https://whitneyoaks.org/documents/>. Architectural meetings are held every third Wednesday of the month, via Zoom. For additional architectural application questions please contact Jasmine Brinson via email at jasmine.brinson@managementtrust.com. ■

Whitney Oaks Wildlife Notes

Ed Price

A pair of Red-shouldered Hawks has frequented the area around the big loop of Clubhouse Drive for the last several years. I didn't know they nested there until this year when a large oak tree blew down in a storm. Their previously used nest was now easy to spot in a dead tree behind where the big oak once stood. In late March I noticed new nesting material had been added to the old nest. Soon afterwards I spotted the female crouched down in the nest presumably incubating eggs. I had read that red-shouldered hawk eggs are hatched in about 33 days so I continued my watch and about a month later the female was still on the nest but not crouched down, suggesting the eggs had hatched. A week or so later I decided to spend some time watching the nest from my car with camera in hand. About every 30 minutes that day the male flew in with food for the female and young (see photos below). In one of the photos you can see the male standing on the nest holding a dead lizard in its beak. The male would give the prey to the female who would tear the prey apart and feed it in small pieces to the young hawk chicks. (The proper name for young hawk nestlings is "eyas".) This continued for a couple more weeks until, one day, the three hawk chicks were alone on the nest. At this point the chicks were growing fast and both parents were bringing them food. On May 30th, the nest was vacated and the chicks were nowhere to be seen but I could tell the parents were nearby from hearing their calls. I have read that the parents will continue to feed the chicks for 8-10 weeks after leaving the nest but it is not uncommon for chicks to perish at this critical stage of their lives.

Red-shouldered hawks are typically found in wet woodland environments in California and the eastern half of the US. They are a medium to large hawk, not quite as large as our red-tailed hawks which also nest in Whitney Oaks. Pairs are monogamous and territorial. Prior to nesting this spring, I observed a third hawk giving the Clubhouse pair a hard time. Round and round they flew repeatedly screaming their kee-rah call.

The prey of red-shouldered hawks largely consists of rodents such as mice, voles and gophers. Other prey includes small birds, reptiles such as lizards, small snakes and amphibians.
